Theodosia Burr.

Puring the senatorial term of Aaron Burr, 1791 and 1797, he was one day driving along a lonely country road in Ulster county, New York. when his horse cast a shoe, and he stopped at a blacksmith shop to have it replaced. While waiting the completion of the operation, he hap-pened to glance at the door of the rude building, and saw there a truthful and vigorous drawing of his vehicle and team done in char coal. which must have been executed in a very few minutes. He inquired for the artist, and a half grown boy, dressed in coarse garments, stepped for rard and said: "I did it sir." Burr entered into conversation with the lad, and soon ascertained that though wholly uneducated he was yet unusually bright and intelligent; that he was born and reared in the neighborhood, and had hired himself to the blacksmith for six months.

Writing a few lines on a slip of paper. Burn handed it to him, and remarked:—"My boy.

Writing a few lines on a slip of paper. Burr handed it to him, and remarked: "My boy. you are too smart a fellow to stay here all your life. If you ever want to change your employment and see something of the world, put a clean shirt in your pocket, go to New York, and come straight to that address. His immerable schemes, and the cares and duties of political life soon drove the incident from the Senator's mind, and he was surprised one morning some months later, while sitting at breakfast at his residence at Richmond Hill, when a servant entered and delivered him a small bundle which had been brought by a boy who was waiting outside. Opening the package he found within a clumsily made clean shirt.

ed the boy, shown up, and in a moment there entered the blacksmith's apprentice, with the slip of paper given him as a guide and introduction. Burr gave him a hearty welcome, took him into his family, directed his education, procured him instruction in the primary principles of drawing and solving and always and alway principles of drawing and coloring, and finally assisted him to go to Europe, where he spent five years. When misfortune and misdeeds had driven the patron a friendless, penniless PURE DRUGS AND CHEMICALS, PAINTS, exile across the sea, the protege was exhibiting his pictures at the Louvre, and gaining compliments and a gold medal from Napoleon. He did all he could to aid his benefactor when they met in Paris, but though Vanderlyn had won fame, money was almost as scarce with him as with Burr. He came back to America, painted the "Landing of Columbus," now in the rotunda of the Capitol at Wash ington; the portrait of Jackson in the City Hall, New York, and other well-known works, and died not long since near the spot where he received his first encouragement to study the art his achievements have adorned.

Previous to his tour abroad Vanderlyn painted the portraits of Burr and his daughter, which are now familiar to all through the engravings attached to the lives of the former, written by Matthew L. Davis and James Parton. This portrait of Theodosia, next to the idolized original, Burr prized more than all else the world contained. It hung in his drawing room at Richmond Hill, and whenever Theodosia's birth day came round, and after her marriage to Governor Alston and removal to South Carolina, it was always brought out for the admiration and toasts of the assembled

When he went to Europe he carried it with him, and when whether visiting the houses of distinguished people in England, or hiding in a Parisian garret, the sweet face looking from the dumb canvass, was ever near to brighten and to bless. He brought it back to New York, and it was at his bedside when he died. From the death-chamber the portrait was transferred to the keeping of Miss Theodosia Prevost, daughter of John B. Prevost. Burr's stepson. There it remained for some time, and member of the family.

Returning from thence it found temporary lodgment in the household of Rev. Dr. Breekinridge of Pleasant Hill, Missouri, whose wife was also a daughter of John B. Prevost. few weeks since it passed into the possession of Mrs. Lucy Breckinridge of Alton, Illinois, and is now in the studio of Mr. J. R. Stuart, cor-

"Well," continued the customer, who was from a mountain town, 11 want to tell-about that last pint you sold me. I went home late at night and hung the bottle up by the fire-place. It was a middling cold night, and when I got up in the morning I found the bottle had dropped on the hearth and broken into a thousand pieces; "but," continued the mountaineer, with animation, the brandy was all right !- there it hung on that nail, froze solider than thunder!

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE. Dr. J. addresses all those who have injured themselves by improper indulgence and solitary habits, which ruin both body and mind, unfitting them for either business, study, society or marriage.

These are some of the sad and melancholy effeets produced by the early habits of youth, viz: Weakness of the Back and Limbs, Pains in the Weakness of the Back and Limbs, Pains in the Head, Dinness of Sight, Loss of Muscular Power, Palpitation of the Heart, Dyspepsia, Nervous Irritability, Derangement of the Digestive Func-tions, General Debility, Symptoms of Consump-

Mentally.—The fearful effects on the mind are much to be dreaded. Loss of Memory, Confusion of Ideas, Depression of Spirits, Evil Forebodings, Aversion to Society, Self Distrust, Love of Solitude, Timidity, &c., are some of the evils produced. Thousands of persons of all ages can now judge what is the cause of their declining health, losing their vigor, becoming weak, pale, nervous and emaciated, having a singular appearance about the eyes, cough and symptoms of Consumption.

Who have injured themselves by a certain practice, already described, a habit frequently learned from evil companions or at school, the effects of which are nightly felt, even when asleep, and if not cured, renders marriage impossible, and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately. What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the pride of his parents, should be snatched from all prospects and enjoyment of life by the consequence of deviating from the MARRIAGE. Reflect that a sound mind and body are the most necessary requisites to promote communal happiness. Indeed, without these the journey dinary success.
